Narrator: Somewhere about there lived a rooster and a hen. Once the rooster scabbled and dug up a bean.

Rooster: Cock-a-doodle-doo! Hen, eat the bean!

Hen: Cluck-cluck! Rooster, eat it yourself!

Narrator: The rooster ate the bean and suddenly choked. He called the hen.

Rooster: Hen! Go to the river, asked for the water. I want to drink.

Narrator: The hen ran to the river and said...

Hen: River! River! Give me some water, please! The rooster choked on a small bean.

River: Go to the apple tree and ask for the leaf for me and then I will give you some water.

Narrator: The hen ran to the apple tree.

Hen: Dear Apple tree! Give me a leaf. I will take it to the river and the river will give me some water for my rooster. He wants to drink. He choked on a small bean!

Apple tree: Go to the lady and ask her for a thread.

Narrator: The hen went to the lady.

I will bring it to the lady and she will give me the thread. I will bring it to the apple tree. The apple tree will give me the leaf, I will bring it to the river. The river will give me some water for my rooster. He wants to drink. He choked on a small bean!

Narrator: The woodcutter gave the baker much firewood, the baker gave some bread to the comber. The comber gave the comb to the lady and the lady gave the thread to the apple tree. The apple tree gave the leaf to the river and the river gave the hen some water. The rooster drank water and the bean slipped through and the rooster started to sing...

Rooster: Cock-a-doodle-doo!
